

The field concentration problem in nano-optics

Sanghyeon Yu

Department of Mathematics, Korea University

Composite materials shows the high field concentration when the inclusions get close to touching. This phenomenon has many practical applications in imaging, spectroscopy, and meta-materials. In this talk, we discuss a new way of tackling the field concentration problem via the spectral analysis of the Neumann-Poincare operator. We shall also discuss a related inverse problem.